SYNTHETIC FIXTURE - NOT REAL RESEARCH

Synthetic Memory Retrieval Study

Methods and results

We studied memory retrieval using a synthetic key-value task on a CPU. The baseline returned the most recent matching entry. Evaluation measured exact-match retrieval on 40 original toy records. These observations are invented test data, not published research. Long-context robustness beyond this toy setting was not evaluated.